

This Writing Just Confuses Me

Aleksandr Shteynberg

I am writing in the same old place but in a different situation. Now I am writing around my family. They are watching T.V. and I am trying to write.

First, I can't concentrate because my mother is speaking with my younger brother. He is explaining to her what is going on in the movie. I keep moving my eyes to the TV because it is more interesting to watch the movie than to write about it. I don't like to write when it is noisy. I like to write when it is quiet and nobody is bothering me. Then I can follow my thoughts. Now I know what it means to write in a noisy place. It does not work for me.

Some people like to listen to music while they write. Some people like to write on the bus or subway where it is very noisy, but not me. I can't concentrate because there are too many different voices and different languages.

At home we speak in Russian because it is easy and so that my mother can understand. But I have to write in English and I am making mistakes. So I will stop writing because this writing just confuses me.

* * *